Dennis frequently participated in selected "by invitation" group shows across the United States. Before Dennis retired around 2006, his pieces were sold throughout the United States through fine crafts galleries. Much of his work found its way into private collections in South America, Europe and Japan.

Alan Mazzetti comes from a family of artists and has been a visual artist all his life. Beach. Immediately after that she flew out of the country and began her High School Art and Graphic Instructor career in Bendigo, Australia for 3 years. After Australia, she roamed around the world sketching and photographing, finally settling back in Los Angeles. Luckily for her, Walt Disney Imagineering was hiring for their big EPCOT and Tokyo Disneyland projects, so she got on board and had a great ride for 22 years doing art documentation, managing creative staff and set decorating. Upon leaving Disney as the Director, Creative Division, she and her husband, Steve Kirk, and brother-in-law, Tim Kirk, started their own Theme Entertainment Company, Kirk Design Inc. Kathy took the President role, and she both managed and did design work in her own company for 11 years. The types and variety of projects that Kathy participated in for her 33 years in the creative industry varied from working and living in Japan as a set decorator to doing design work for the King of Jordan and participating in concept sessions with banking, military, medical, as well as museum and entertainment companies. It was exhilarating but now she can enjoy her own projects.

Tim Kirk received his art degree from California State University Long Beach in the 1970s. He is a designer and illustrator with wide experience in a broad media spectrum---from greeting cards and book and magazine illustration to theme park and museum exhibit design. Tim's paintings based on J.R.R. Tolkien's epic fantasy, The Lord of the Rings, appeared in the 1975 Tolkien Calendar published by Ballantine Books. Tim was employed as an imagineer by the Walt Disney Company for 22 years, and still consults on theme park design for Disney theme parks worldwide. (Imagineers are the folks who come up with the ideas for the theme park rides, stores, restaurants, etc.) Tim is a five-time winner of the prestigious Hugo Award for science fiction and fantasy illustration.
